For Immediate Release

ATLANTA, Georgia — The “pain at the pump” may not be as pronounced as it was in 2008. But efforts to reduce fuel consumption are still in full swing at companies like 3PD, which shared one of its most successful conservation tactics in the October issue of DC Velocity.

In the story, “How To Beat The High Cost Of Fuel,” 3PD Executive Vice President of Warehousing and Logistics Russ Marzen spoke about how 3PD had refined its transportation model to reduce the average distance between stops from 21 to 12 miles. Just as significant, he alluded to the company’s ongoing quest to reduce that number even further.
